Step 1, Smile and be nice. If you've had a bad day, leave it at home and be polite while on shift, even to the meanest customers. You don't need to be a pushover, but you're more likely to leave your customer happy and satisfied if you're slower but in a great mood than if you're the fastest cashier ever but snappy and rude. If you can't sincerely be cheerful, at least try to fake it. Step 2, Ask the customer if "they are having a good day". Actually listen to their response and acknowledge ...
